DANIELA GALLI is an internationally accomplished actress whose work spans major platforms and stages across Brazil, Europe, and the United States. A multilingual performer fluent in English and Portuguese, and proficient in Spanish, Italian, and Dutch, she has built a dynamic career across theatre, film, and television.

She recently received outstanding critical acclaim for her performance in the one-woman play The Other Mozart, earning multiple ★★★★★ reviews at the Edinburgh Fringe, being named a Critic's Pick by The Times, and receiving an Off West End Theatre Award nomination, following its acclaimed Off-Broadway run.

Her screen credits include HBO Max's Angela, Prime Video's The President (Season 2), Disney+'s How to Be a Carioca, and Sony's Passport to Freedom. In film, she has collaborated with directors such as Oscar winners Walter Salles and Armando Bo, as well as Hector Babenco. Her film credits include Netflix's The Killer (Best Actress nomination at the Gramado Film Festival), My Hindu Friend (directed by Babenco and starring Willem Dafoe), Those Hands That Lead Me, and The American Side (starring Matthew Broderick).

On television, she has appeared in Malhação: Viva a Diferença (Globoplay), Obscure Power (Contigo! Award nomination for Best Actress), Mandrake (HBO), as well as numerous productions for TV Globo and Record.

Before dedicating herself fully to acting, Daniela trained at HB Studio in New York and developed a multidisciplinary artistic foundation as a dancer, musician, and designer. She performed with modern and tap dance companies, played oboe with the Symphonic Orchestra of Campinas, and worked as a set designer on Broadway and Off-Broadway, as well as at Lincoln Center, the Kennedy Center, and London's Royal Court Theatre.

Daniela is a SAG-AFTRA member, a US Green Card holder, and holds dual Brazilian and Italian citizenship.